1 Year On

Why is the world becoming more allergic?

"I was moved beyond words by the tragic death of Natasha Ednan-Laperouse and the way her parents have selflessly dedicated themselves to preventing other families from suffering in the same way. That is why my Prince's Foundation is hosting leading scientists and experts in the field to tackle the environmental causes of allergic disease so that no more lives are needlessly lost due to allergic reactions."

- His Majesty King Charles III

Medical Research is the 'key'

- The Natasha Clinical Trial, OIT (Oral Immunotherapy)
- £2.5 million, 6 universities, announced in May 2022.
- Fund the future allergy leaders and researchers – PhD and MSc students specialising in allergies, leading in research and developing treatments.
- Understand the causes of food allergies and how they can be prevented from starting gut microbiome, genomics and environmental factors.
- Translate research to improve daily lives: at scale.

Our campaign for an Allergy Tsar

An Allergy Tsar would:

- Act as a public champion to tackle the allergy epidemic now
- Increase the number of specialist allergy clinics – one in every part of the country
- Develop a National Register of Severe Allergic Reactions detailing all hospitalisations, fatalities, and a Near Misses Register of incidents.
- Join up GP and hospital allergy services so that patients have a coherent NHS care pathway.
- Train more specialist allergy doctors and consultants, and mandatory training in allergies for all GPs.

The campaign was fronted by Tanya Ednan-Laperouse OBE and Emma Turay who both lost their daughters to anaphylaxis.

Your important work in our nation's hospitals

We want to help you and your colleagues in the NHS by:

- Campaigning for mandatory allergy training for all chefs, kitchen staff and colleagues that handle food.
- Ensuring your food suppliers improve their ingredient/allergen information.
